Helps students learn more: create a supportive environment

According to recent studies, when teachers create an atmosphere where students feel supported, they are more willing to take academic risks ("7 Strategies to Improve Student Learning in the Classroom", ESS ess.com). By giving students the tools to encourage and support each other, they create a safe space where students will accept the challenge and stretch themselves to learn.

The importance of a supportive environment

A supportive environment is crucial for student learning. When students feel safe and supported, they are more likely to engage in the learning process, which increases their attention and focus. According to the University of Washington's Teaching and Learning department, instructors who adopt a student-centered approach to instruction increase opportunities for student engagement, which then helps everyone more successfully achieve the course's learning objectives ("Engaging students - Teaching @UW - University of Washington").

How to create a supportive environment

One way to create a supportive environment is by using a student-centered approach to instruction. This means that instructors should design activities and assessments that engage students in the learning process and give them ownership of their learning. This approach also includes creating a safe space where students feel comfortable making mistakes and taking risks. Another way to create a supportive environment is by providing regular feedback to students. According to research, students who receive regular feedback are more likely to succeed academically. Feedback can take many forms, such as written comments, verbal feedback, or conferencing. However, it's important to ensure that the feedback is constructive and specific.

Benefits of a supportive environment

By creating a supportive environment, teachers can help students learn more and increase their academic achievement. Moreover, a supportive environment promotes student engagement and motivation, leading to a more positive and productive classroom.

Conclusion

Creating a supportive environment in the classroom is essential to student learning. By engaging students in the learning process, providing regular feedback, and establishing a safe and positive space, teachers can help students learn more and achieve their academic goals.
