What are Bet365 Fantasy Sports?

In addition to Bet365 6

Scores Challenge, a free-to-play prediction game that give players the chance to win up to one million pound, in August 2024 Bet365 launched its new Fantasy Sports challenge, an exciting cooperation with Scout Gaming group, a B2B Fantasy Sports Gaming and Betting provider.

Customers can select their team and watch them gain fantasy points based on performance in real-world matches.

Some tournaments will be weekly competitions, while some tournaments will take place over the course of a full season.

Entry fees go from a few hundred pounds to just a few pence.

Top players will receive a cash prize. The higher is your final position, the higher will be your earnings, as this kind of competition is paying places just like a poker tournament.

A Bet365

spokesperson added: "We're thrilled to launch our Fantasy product to our UK customers, and are in the process of delivering the same exciting experience to our customers worldwide.”

Bet365’s investment in the globally growing fantasy segment is a great news for the gambling industry. Their fantasy model does bear similarities to that seen at big US operators such as FanDuel and DraftKings.

Anyway, it is worth noting DFS has never been well received in the UK and that the non-gambling option of fantasy gameplay provided by the Premier League very much dominates the UK market.

How Does Bet365

Fantasy Football work?

Bet365’s Fantasy Football feature will offer numerous ways to play and include full season and weekly tournaments, as well as varying entry prices. The cost to enter the season-long tournament is set at £4.25 and the current prize pot exceeds £50,000.

Bet365’s rake on an entry to the season-long tournament is 72p which equates to 20%. The remaining 80% goes to the prize pot.

Bet365 is also offering higher rollers a chance to play with higher stakes. Alongside a game with a buy-in of £42.50, there is a ‘High Roller’ version of the game, which costs £467.50 to enter.
