answer> Work Content: The content discusses PokerStars' R$60 Cooking & Baking A recipe requires 4 cups of flour, but you accidentally poured out 1 cup too much into the mixing bowl. How many tablespoons are in the excess amount if there are 16 tablespoons in a cup? Solution: If you've poured an extra 1 cup beyond the required 4 cups for the recipe, and knowing that there are 16 tablespoons in a single cup, we can calculate the total number of tablespoons in this excess amount.

To find out how many tablespoons are in the 1 extra cup poured out:

$1 \text{ cup} \times 16 \text{ tablespoons/cup} = 16 \text{ tablespoons}$

So there are 16 tablespoons in the excess amount of flour that was added to the mixing bowl.
