An all-you-need-to-know guide on how to watch every Premier League game broadcast live throughout the 2024-24 season

For many of us, we don't know where we'd be without the Premier League season. The summer months are spent feeling a little lost until it all kicks off again in August and each season we become blessed with more live coverage than ever before.

This year is no different and across the season there are hundreds of games you can tune in for as the biggest teams fight for supremacy and a number more battle it out for Premier League survival. But where can you watch the action?

Well, as you can see, there are a few options, with different sports subscription services having different volumes of access to different games. In the UK, domestic rights to watch live Premier League matches are split across three platform - Sky Sports, TNT Sports, formerly BT Sport, and Prime Video, all of whom have rights to show the English top flight until the end of 2024/25.

As usual, the BBC also continues to provide highlights through its Match of the Day and Match of the Day 2 programming later in the evenings on matchdays.
