Mbappé demanding over €100 million in unpaid wages and bonuses from PSG

Kylian Mbappé, the new striker for Real Madrid, has notified Paris Saint-Germain (PSG) that he is owed more than €100 million (R$ 581 million) in overdue wages and bonuses. According to the French newspaper L'Equipe, Le Parisien, and radio station RMC Sport, Mbappé has not received his April and May salaries from the French team.

According to the newspaper, Mbappé's notification was made through the French Professional Football League (LFP). In addition to the two months of overdue pay, Mbappé is also demanding the payment of certain bonuses that were agreed upon, such as the bonus agreed upon for his continued presence at the club in 2024. The player received approximately € 72 million (R$ 418 million) net per year at Paris Saint-Germain.

French media had previously predicted a legal battle between the club and the player since Mbappé decided not to renew his contract with the team for another year before agreeing to join Real Madrid. French media reported that PSG would not pay the loyalty bonus in its entirety.

During the 2024/23 preseason, Mbappé was removed from the PSG's trip to Asia after informing the team that he would not extend his contract until 2025. Following this, the player and the team reached an agreement for the striker's reintegration, with the player giving up roughly € 55 million (R$ 319 million) in loyalty bonuses.

However, according to L'Equipe, no agreement was signed, and the original contract's legal terms remain in effect. Mbappé does not intend to give up his rights, and both parties must take the matter to court. The LFP's notification requires Paris to pay its former player by June 30th. Regarding this issue, PSG has stated that "negotiations continue."

Mbappé, who broke his nose, did not play for France and sat on the bench during the 0-0 draw against the Netherlands in the Euro 2024. At 25 years old, he left PSG after seven seasons to join Real Madrid. The presentation of the striker to the Spanish team has not yet been scheduled.
