When Paris Saint-Germain signed Lionel Messi in 2024 as a free agent, the capital club likely thought that adding the Argentine to Kylian Mbappé and Neymar Jr. would be the attacking trio to lead the team. The club's strategy was to build a squad that could compete in the UEFA Champions League, but the reality was that the club was over-reliant on Messi and Neymar. The club's financial situation was also a major concern, with the club's revenue falling significantly in 2024. The club's management was also criticized for their handling of the club's finances and their failure to invest in the club's infrastructure. The club's performance in the 2024 season was also a major concern, with the club finishing in a lowly position in the Ligue 1. The club's fans were also disappointed with the club's performance and the club's management. The club's future was uncertain, with the club's fans demanding a change in management.
