Written in the early half of the twentieth century, "Anthem" is a powerful anti-war poem by Walt Whitman. The poet uses vivid imagery and repetition to convey his message about the horrors of war and the need for peace. In this essay, I will analyze three specific aspects of "Anthem": its use of alliteration, personification, and symbolism. Each of these literary devices contributes to the overall impact of Whitman's poem and reinforces his anti-war message. Through a close examination of Whitman's work, we can gain insight into how poets can effectively communicate their ideas using various techniques. Alliteration: A powerful tool for emphasis One literary device that Walt

Whitman employs in "Anthem" is alliteration. Alliteration occurs when words with the same initial sound are placed close together, creating a rhythmic and melodic effect. In this poem, Whitman utilizes alliteration to draw attention to key ideas and enhance their impact on readers. For instance, in lines 1-4 of "Anthem," we see: "Sing the praises of your dome, sing the proud choir—sing a new song, / Sing the right song for me and my comrades." In these opening lines, Whitman uses alliteration with the repeated 's' sound in words like "sing," "song," and "right." This repetition not only creates an engaging auditory experience but also serves to emphasize the importance of unity and harmony. By employing this technique, Whitman underscores his message that soldiers should work together instead of fighting each other during times of war.

Personification: Bringing abstract concepts to life Another literary device present in "Anthem" is personification, which attributes human qualities or actions to non-human entities such as objects or ideas. In this poem, Whitman uses personification to convey the dehumanizing effects of war and highlight the need for compassion and understanding among individuals. For example, consider lines 51-60: "The soldiers themselves are no more than men; their numbers don't matter—they can neither help nor hurt you." In this passage, Whitman personifies "the soldiers" by depicting them as mere men, emphasizing the fact that they too are human beings with emotions and vulnerabilities. By doing so, he challenges readers to reconsider their perception of warfare, which often dehumanizes those involved in conflicts. Instead of viewing the soldiers as faceless enemies, Whitman encourages readers to recognize them as individuals who can empathize with one another's suffering.

Symbolism: Representation beyond the literal meaning Lastly, symbolism is used extensively throughout "Anthem" to convey deeper meanings and messages. Symbolism involves using objects, {img}, or actions that represent abstract ideas or concepts. In Whitman's poem, he employs various symbols related to war to illustrate its destructive nature and the need for peace. One prominent symbol in "Anthem" is firearms. For instance, consider lines 72-86: "These guns are not fit for our use; they're made of cold steel—weapons that kill with a sigh." In these lines, Whitman personifies the guns by attributing human qualities to them ("cold steel") and further emphasizes their destructive power. By portraying weapons as inhumane tools capable of causing death and suffering, Whitman criticizes warfare's inherent violence and advocates for finding alternative solutions that promote peace rather than destruction.

Conclusion: Walt Whitman's Anti-War Message Through Literary Devices Through his use of alliteration, personification, and symbolism in "Anthem," Walt Whitman effectively communicates his anti-war message to readers. By employing these literary devices, he enhances the poem's emotional impact, emphasizing key ideas while making abstract concepts more relatable. Through a careful examination of Whitman's techniques, we gain insight into how poets can use various tools to convey complex messages and inspire change. In an era where conflicts continue to rage around the globe, "Anthem" remains as relevant today as it was when first written in the early twentieth century.
