Racismo jugó un "papel significativo" en la detención violenta en el aeropuerto de Manchester, según un ex jefe superior de la Metropolitan Police

A video of the detention, filmed at Manchester airport on Tuesday, appears to show a man being punched in the face and having his head pummeled by a Manchester Metropolitan Police (MMP) officer while lying on the ground, with a later clip showing the officer pushing a woman who is trying to calm the situation.

On Thursday, the MMP said the officer had been suspended from all duties after a "thorough review of additional information". The force referred its actions to the Independent Office for Police Conduct on Wednesday.

Dal Babu, who served for more than 30 years at the Met, described the video as impactful and "totally reprehensible".

Babu said the force used "totally excessive" force against a man who was "essentially defenseless", adding: "I believe racism played a significant role in this".

The former police chief also questioned the MMP's ability to handle the situation and work with communities to reduce tension.

The MMP said three of its officers were injured in the altercation at terminal 2 of the airport, including a female officer who suffered a broken nose, and four men were arrested for disorderly conduct and assaulting emergency workers.

Durante una protesta el miércoles por la noche, se reportó que los manifestantes gritaron "GMP vergüenza de ti" cuando una estimación de 200 personas se reunió frente a la estación de policía de Rochdale. El jefe de policía Wasim Chaudhry dijo que la protesta "concluyó sin incidentes", agregando: "Entendemos el enorme sentimiento de preocupación y ansiedad que la gente siente sobre nuestra respuesta y respetamos plenamente su derecho a manifestar sus opiniones pacíficamente."
