When you're playing games that fit your bankroll. As a basic rule of thumb, your bankroll should be at least 20 times the amount you're betting. This helps you manage your risk and avoid going broke. Additionally, it's important to set a budget and stick to it. This means knowing when to stop playing and taking a break. Remember, gambling should be fun, not a source of stress or financial trouble. If you're having trouble controlling your gambling, it's important to seek help. There are many resources available, including support groups and counseling services. Remember, you're not alone, and there's always help available.
