Companies operating betting on horse racing activities should obtain permission from the Jockey Club of Turkey for all changes to their shareholding structure. This is because gambling in Turkey is highly regulated. In fact, Turkey banned casinos in 1998, and it banned non-state online gambling in 2006.

Despite the restrictions, you can still bet on horse racing in Turkey by having an online betting account with a bookmaker that offers horse racing odds and has Turkish racing prices. According to the law, the license for horserace betting lies with the Wealth Fund, which has authorized the Turkish Jockey Club to organize betting for horse racing.

While casinos are banned in Turkey, Turkish citizens can still participate in online gambling and bet on horse races and the state-sponsored Milli Piyango lottery. However, it's important to note that some international bookmakers may not be available in Turkey due to restrictions.

If you're looking for a way to bet on horse racing in Turkey, you can consider creating an account with IDDAA, which is the state-owned online betting platform. Alternatively, you can look into international bookmakers that offer horse racing odds and have Turkish racing prices.
